Rachelle Sawatsky: Toy Dust

Night Gallery

November 9—December 20

Rachelle Sawatsky's work could be compared to the surface of human skin—traces of gravel, sand, and chains leave evidence of prior contact, without leaving explicit detail of their exact weight, size, or subject matter. In her exhibition "Toy Dust"—the artist's first showing at Night Gallery—the Sawatsky's works on view employ a range of colors and suggestions of texture, seen in painted canvases composed of bleeding, swirled hues, and imprinted with the memory of forms like leaves, grass, and other materials.
