Artists and Galleries Are Selling Works to Support the Black Lives Matter Movement. Here Are 14 Fundraisers Happening Now

Art lovers are being incentivized to donate to protest-related causes by artists and galleries across the country.

Noor Brara & Katie White, June 8, 2020

As the nation continues to grapple with the death of George Floyd and the realities of systemic racism and police brutality, thousands have donated to bail funds and organizations such as Black Lives Matter.

In the art world, several artists and galleries have also begun selling works to benefit various bail funds and organizations that are working to combat racism, from the Minnesota Freedom Fund to the Black Trans Advocacy Coalition.

13. Night Gallery exhibition to benefit Black Lives Matter

The Los Angeles gallery is hosting an online exhibition of works from its own inventory including Awol Erizku, Tomashi Jackson, and Christine Wang, among others. The exhibition aims to highlight artists with a longstanding commitment to creating work with a message and is open through June 22, 2020.

Who Will Receive Donations: 100% of the profits will be split between Black Lives Matter and Los Angeles-based organizations including Critical Resistance, the Los Angeles Action Bail Fund, Los Angeles Black Worker Center, and Equal Justice Initiative.
